Thank you to Darlene Napolitano and the Activity Committee for an amazing New Year's Eve Gala. The room looked magical and the food was great.

Many many thanks to Jim DiBiase, the Cultural Committee and thanks to Marianne Reali for heading the Annual 7 Fish Dinner. Record breaking year with over 200 people attending. 101 REASONS TO BE PROUD YOU'RE ITALIAN

REASON # 13 La Lingua Italiana

La lingua Italiana is anything but an ordinary language. Speak in any other tongue and you are merely communicating. Speak Italian and the conversation lives and breaths with its own dynamic vitality. It is a language where the vowels and consonants perform a rhapsodic dance together - a passionate, musical language of love.

It is a food. We all know how Italians love a good meal, and this desire spills into the words. Reading a menu or a cookbook is a delicious exercise for the jaw and lips. Tortellini, gnocchi, aglio e olio, prosciutto. The words float on the tongue. Lasagna, ravioli pesce. The mandible moves as if chewing. Cannoli, gelati, tirami sú. The mouth waters as a lubricant for the alphabet. Speaking of this rich food is the antipasto to the antipasto. And it extends to all words, not just those centered around the table. A light conversation is a snack; an intense one, full-blown dinner. To talk is to eat is to enjoy.

It is a song. Hearing someone speak Italian from a distance is like hearing a familiar tune on the radio. It has melody, rhythm. The inflection is up, and then it is down. The tone is clear, delicate. An Italian day begins and ends with this music. A crisp, perky Buon giorno is on everyone's lips in the morning. When the night falls, a gentle Buona sera is the greeting, the sera lingering a beat longer on the palette, letting you ponder the hours in between.

It is a dance. The rhythm is too strong, the melody too sweet. The head must move with the syllables, and the body cannot help but follow. The hand cups at the fingertip; the wrist becomes limp. It rocks back and forth in gentle cadence with the meter.

It is wine. The language has gracefully aged through the centuries into a full-bodied form of expression. It has a bouquet. The patter of phrases often tickles the nose. It is smooth and robust. It often leaves you light-headed, intoxicated with terminology. Of course, it's romantic. It's a Romance language. Examine the root and you have Roma.

Like a rose, it, too, has its thorns. Cross an Italian and all the food, wine, song, and dance come hurling at you. The meal turns, the song screeches, the fists rise, the wine brings nausea. There is simply no defense.

All the magic of Italy is contained within its wonderful language. One sentence can send you to heaven or hell. Purgatory is reserved for those who do not understand it.
